

Commercial Property Renovation.

A case study

Mr Ferguson is planning to buy a rundown social club with the intention to renovate the club to create a public house and develop the upper floor into office space, which could be let out. He intends to fund the proposed purchase as an investment through his pension scheme.

The facts

- Mr Ferguson has three separate personal pensions valued at around £190,000, which he intends to consolidate by transferring them into a Dentons SIPP
- The loan, as with any transaction between the SIPP and the member or any other connected party, must be on commercial terms and documented
- Mr Ferguson has personal savings earning little interest, which he can lend to the SIPP to augment the funds needed to fund the renovation. Any transaction such as a loan between the SIPP and a connected party (the member) must be established on commercial terms and documented.

The process

- Mr Ferguson completes a Dentons Commercial Property Questionnaire
- The questionnaire captures the data necessary for Dentons to ensure the property is fully commercial, that it meets other acceptance criteria and that there are sufficient funds to cover the property purchase, associated expenses and expected renovation costs
- Dentons accepts the property, along with the required renovation work
- Mr Ferguson establishes a Dentons SIPP and arranges the transfers from his three personal pension funds into the SIPP
- Dentons sends instructions to the solicitor named on the Commercial Property Questionnaire who is to act for the SIPP trustees who are Mr Ferguson and Dentons' bare trustee company (Denton & Co Trustees Limited)
- The property purchase is from an unconnected third party; therefore, a professional opinion of valuation is not required
- The transfers into the SIPP are subject to a 30-day mandatory cancellation period. Once this period has expired, the SIPP funds can be used to pay the property deposit and complete the property purchase
- Mr Ferguson arranges for his solicitor to prepare the documentation on the loan from him to the SIPP having obtained evidence of commercial life-for-like terms.

The result

- Once the renovations are complete the pub on the ground floor is let to an unconnected public house company for £200,000 per annum and the offices on the upper floor to an unconnected company for £6,000 per annum.
- The rents received by the SIPP are then used to service and repay the loan from Mr Ferguson
- Mr Ferguson uses his own solicitor for the property
- Mr Ferguson manages the property himself and the SIPP avoids having to pay additional management costs
- The leases provide tax-free investment income to the SIPP
- Any gain in the value of the property is free from capital gains tax.

Notes

- > If for any reason the business was going to change how the building is used, the public house and/or office will require planning permission for a 'Change of Use'
- > If the contractor of the renovation is a connected party, it may be necessary for quotations to be obtained from unconnected contractors to establish whether the connected contractor is charging a market rate for their services
- > The management of the property is the responsibility of the pension scheme member, either directly or through a duly appointed professional property manager. If required, we can issue rent invoices and complete VAT returns, for which we will charge in accordance with our fees schedule.
- > Dentons will arrange for the property to be insured under a block policy arrangement unless alternative arrangements are required or the property is a leasehold and the freeholder arranges the insurance.
